

States Exhibit Palace, Jamestown Exposition.

THE JAMESTOWN EXPOSITION.

When, Where, What For, and a Glimpse At Its Location.

On May 13, 1607, three boats anchored off a peninsula which jutted into Powhatan's River, and there set up a stockaded place of defense, which they called James Fort. One hundred and five settlers were left by the ships, among these were John Smith, a wonderful genius and adventurer, a man destined to carry the infant colony through perilous trials.

Smith and his men and those who followed them made out the fort a town which they called James City, and from James City, grew Virginia, and from Virginia, these United States.

The Exposition will celebrate in 1907 the 300th anniversary of the nation's beginning. Beginning April 23, and ending Dec. 1.

It will be located on the shores overlooking the beautiful waters of Hampton Roads, Virginia, around which cluster the populous and thriving cities of Norfolk, Portsmouth and Newport News.

The site is one of unsurpassed natural beauty, and of landscape material which promises the most picturesque effect ever attained at any exposition held in America.

The Tidewater Cities. Norfolk, Portsmouth, Newport News, Hampton, and Old Point Comfort, the Exposition cities, are located on the shores of Hampton Roads, within twenty minutes' ride of the Exposition grounds by rail and water.

The City of Norfolk. Geographical situation and the fortunes of war have combined to give Norfolk prominence. The site of Norfolk was close to the strongest currents of colonial, revolutionary and sectional activity.

The first white men known to have visited the city of Norfolk were members of an expedition dispatched to America by Sir Walter Raleigh in 1585. "Norfolk Town" was founded on the 16th of August, 1607. In the early chronicles it is related that a stockade was built to protect the town against Indian attacks.

The Norfolk of today is replete with historic and reminiscent features. It is in the Norfolk Academy one of the finest Doric specimens extant. This building is one hundred years old. The most historic structure in the town is old St. Paul's church, erected in 1739, twice fired on by the British, and still retaining imbedded in its walls a shell fired by Lord Dunmore's fleet, January 1, 1776.

Norfolk is surrounded by interesting fortifications, ancient churches and other buildings. It is cosmopolitan; a good place to live in and a good place in which to make a living. It has beautiful residences and blocks of magnificent business houses, modern hotels and unequalled transportation facilities.

Portsmouth. Opposite the city of Norfolk, separated by the Elizabeth river, is the busy city of Portsmouth, noted for its commercial and social activity. Beautiful houses testify to its wealth. Near the city is the Norfolk Navy Yard, which was burned and blown up by the Federal troops in 1862 and rebuilt by the Confederates. There are immense dry docks, machinery shops of all kinds useful in ship construction, barracks and parade grounds. Besides the sailors from the ships and the marines who are quartered here, 3,000 men find steady employment in the yard, which has probably cost over $20,000,000. The great United States Naval Hospital, where aged and disabled Jackies of the Navy are treated at the government's expense, is not far distant. Portsmouth was founded under its present name in 1753.

Newport News. Newport News has the greatest ship-building plant in the country. Here many battleships, cruisers, torpedo-boat destroyers and submarines have been built. The yard has the largest dry dock in the New World. A visitor may see ships in all stages of construction. This ship yard has cost about $15,000,000, and as a permanent exhibit annually draws thousands of visitors. In addition to its monetary cost, it has a patriotic value which cannot be expressed in figures. It was off Newport News that the men from Jamestown sighted Lord Delaware's ships when he came to Virginia in 1610 and saved the colony. Newport News lies just across from the Exposition grounds where the James river empties into Hampton Roads.

Hampton. Hampton was the Indian village, Kecoughtan, when the English came to America. It is the oldest continuous settlement of Englishmen in the New World and is the repository of many historic treasures. One among many is St. John's church, the oldest public building in the town, said to be the third oldest church in the State. The Pembroke Farm nearby is noted for its curious ancient monuments of black marble. Hampton has the first free school established in America, the Symmes-Edison. This beautiful city is located on Hampton Roads, just across from the Exposition grounds.

Commerce and Navigation. The commercial features of the Tidewater Cities should not be overlooked. We have here a great jobbing center and wholesale district possessing ramifications which extend throughout the entire south. The chief coasting station of the United States Navy is located here. This is the first lumber port of the south, the second coal port of the country, the fourth cotton port and one of the greatest exporting points for miscellaneous commodities. Its merchants and its public spirited business men are to their enterprise and tenacity of purpose is due largely the result of bringing about the celebration of an event in which every patriotic American is heartily interested.

Ride Trips For Visitors. In addition to a large number of beautiful suburban resorts, no section of the country is so well supplied with attractive and historic points of interest in its immediate vicinity.

Old Point Comfort. Old Point Comfort, known as Fort Monroe, originally a palisaded fort of the first settlers, planned in 1614 and fortified a few years later. Here is to be seen Fort Monroe, the largest and best equipped fortress in America and chief artillery station of the United States Government, and might properly be called a school for the army and navy. With the exception of Gibraltar it is perhaps the greatest fortress in the world, possessing the longest line of fortification. With its great disappearing guns and modern machinery of war it stands, sentinal-like, in plain view of the Expedition grounds, separated only by six miles of water. Here also is located the great Chamberlain Hotel the scene of many diplomatic and social functions.

The Rip-Raps. The Rip-Raps, or Fort Wool, a built-up island lying between Forts Monroe and the Exposition grounds, consists of a fine granite fort, earthworks within and without, carrying immense disappearing guns, having cost the government already $10,000,000 to produce. This fort overlooks and commands the entrance to the Chesapeake Bay.

Yorktown. At Yorktown where Lord Cornwallis surrendered to the Continental Army is a fine monument dedicated to the soldiers who won the victory of 1781. There is another monument to mark the exact spot of the surrender. There stands the first United States House opened in the United States; the Moore house on Temple Farm, where are the ruins of the old church built in 1659; there is the cave in which Cornwallis took refuge during the bombardment of the place, and the old Nelson House upon which Thomas Nelson who was in Washington's army, knowing that British officers were housed in his residence, begged the Continentals to fire, and offered a reward for each shot that hit the mark. On the Pamunkey river, not far from Yorktown, there stands the White House, which is a reproduction of the one in which Washington was married in 1759, and occupies the same site. On the ridge of Ware Creek not far from the White House is an old stone house which was mentioned in Smith's history of Virginia, and was built by the Jamestown settlers as a place of retreat in case of an Indian uprising. Nearby is the well-known Powhatan's chimney.

Ocean View. Ocean View is located on the Chesapeake Bay within range of the monster guns of Forts Monroe and Fort Wool, popularly known as the Atlantic City of the south, hardly two miles from the Exposition grounds, the point at which the Federal soldiers landed during the Civil War, and one of the finest bathing and fishing resorts in the country. A short distance from Ocean View on a spot of land known as Willowby Bay, overlooking the Exposition grounds, is the home of the Hampton Roads Yacht Club which will be a central point of interest during the yachting races that will be held in the summer of 1907.

Cape Henry. Cape Henry, where the English first disembarked in 1607, a stone tablet now has supplanted the old wooden cross raised by the first settlers to mark the spot where the adventurers landed on American soil. It is easily reached by trolley or rail. It has two great lighthouses, one dating from 1690, the other completed in the latter part of the nineteenth century. Back from the shore are mountainous sand dunes.

Virginia Beach. A few miles further down the Atlantic coast and thirty minutes from Norfolk by trolley and rail, is famous Virginia Beach, with its great seaside hotels, the scene of summer excursions and seaside sports, the best and safest surf bathing on the Atlantic coast where tens of thousands annually enjoy the delightful ocean breezes. The waters of the Gulf Stream sweep this beach, thus giving the resort a temperature not enjoyed by beaches in the north.

For the Children

You must have plenty of grit, courage, strength. How is it with the children? Are they thin, pale, delicate? Do not forget Ayer's Sarsaparilla. You know it makes the blood pure and rich, and builds up the general health in every way.

The children's blood is the most delicate and the most easily affected. It is the foundation of the body, and if it is impure, the child will be weak and sickly.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best blood purifier and the best tonic for children. It is made of the most pure and healthful ingredients, and it is the only blood purifier that is safe for children.

Make Ayer's Sarsaparilla a part of your household medicine. It will keep the children healthy and strong, and it will give them a good complexion.

POULTRY AND BEES

NEW ZEALAND CANDIED HONEY.

A New Machine For Cutting the Cakes Into Small Bricks.

The illustration accompanying this article shows a honey-cutter that does its work well. The box of the cutter is made of wood, and large enough to hold a block of honey that has been candied in a 50-pound can. The tin has first to be cut off; then strong plane wires are laid around the block three inches apart, through slits left in the inside box. These are fastened to the drum of the windlass on top, and after four turns of the crank, the wires have done their work straight and neat. These large blocks are then put in the little wooden apparatus to the right, and cut into slices 1.8 inches square. This gives you a block of honey 2x1.8x1.8, exactly one-half pound. The blocks are then covered with two papers, the outside one printed with the name and address of the producer. These small honey blocks have taken immensely well, writes a correspondent of Bee Culture, the grocer preferring to sell it all ready in paper, and the housewife also preferring it in paper to digging it out of a bottle.

One great feature of honey cut into blocks is that it looks clean and attractive, and the wrapper comes next to nothing—hence a greater demand for honey. The inventor of the honey-cutter is Mr. James Allan, of Wyndham, Otago, New Zealand, president of the most southern bee-keepers' association in the world.

A GOOD POULTRY HOUSE.

It is the One That Will Best Meet the Needs of the Flock.

The best poultry house is the poultry house that will give the best conditions for the care of the poultry in winter. There are several things that must be considered in any model poultry house. The first of these is light. There should be an abundance of light; for it is probably true that health is not possible in a dark poultry house with one little window to let in light perhaps from the north side. The windows should be on three sides of the house if possible, on every side except the north. There should be a window in the east and west ends of the building and a big one or several small ones on the south side. Whether there should be a big one or several small ones depends on the conditions to be met with in the poultry house.

The really good poultry house, says Farmers Review, will be so located and so built that it will be kept dry throughout the winter. This matter of dryness is of such importance that it may well be doubted if success is possible without it. The location of the house on land that is well drained is essential, and if there is not a natural location near the barn one can be made by piling up stones or chinders around the house to keep the level above the water line.

POULTRY NOTES.

Variety of food is better for poultry than any one food. Do not feed turkeys for 24 hours before killing for market. Dry quarters for ducks at night—wet quarters for daytime. When the cockerets become attentive to the pullets, separate them. If a hen begins to get very fat, it is fair to suppose that she has stopped laying. New corn is likely to sour in the fowls' crops and cause inflammation and indigestion. Every keeper of poultry should lay in a large supply of grit before the ground freezes. It is easier to keep eggs from becoming dirty than it is to clean them when they have become dirty. Pullets that are not matured are said to be "matted." It will not pay to keep them through the winter. "Matted" are wanted for eating only. The male bird is a superlatively fat hen for just as many eggs without him, and the eggs will keep longer.

Feed of Hen. The quantity of food required by old hens that are laying is not sufficient for the pullets. If the pullets get much the old hens will become fat. Keep them separated.

ROAD AND FARM IMPROVEMENT

GOOD ROADS.

Progress Which the Movement is Making Throughout the Country.

Throughout the country, especially in rural districts, the demand for information as to the best methods of road construction is steadily growing, where people are willing to expend money on mending their highways. Owing to inexperience and lack of organization, money is frequently wasted. In some counties well able to support a system of good roads, little work is done owing to lack of knowledge. It is in just such cases that the work of the office of public roads is proving of signal value. The department does not undertake the construction of roads, which can be and should be the work of counties within the states, but the educational value of employing experts in the construction of sections of improved roads in different parts of the country has been fully demonstrated. Says the Journal of Agriculture, expert advice on road construction has been given and experimental field work carried on, and wherever possible, objectless roads are being constructed for the purpose of illustrating the best methods of road building. The local authorities furnish material, common labor, teams and fuel, the office of public roads supplying supervising engineers and, in some cases, part or all of the machinery. During the past year 17 roads were built in 11 states, representing a wide diversity in character of construction and kinds of material used. Much has been done by the office in developing the use of sand and clay and country roads in areas of the country where no stone is available.

Methods of rendering roads dustless have been investigated. Tests were also made with Tarmac oil and its effect on earth and macadam roads. After more than seven months tarred roads were found in excellent condition.

Co-operation with the postoffice department has been begun, in order to facilitate rural delivery by improvement of country roads. The plan, approved by the secretary of agriculture and the postmaster general, provides that when a road upon which a rural route has been or is about to be established is reported by the carrier or inspector to be impassable or in bad repair, the office of public roads shall be at once advised of the fact through the postoffice, and an engineer inspector will be detailed to examine the road and give necessary advice to the local officials.

LADDER THAT WON'T SLIP.

Easily Fixed by Attaching Piece of Rough Hemlock Board to Bottom.

When it is desired to use a ladder where there is any possibility of its slipping, as, for instance, upon a smooth barn floor, it should be so constructed that it will hold, says a writer in the American Agriculturist. A pair of sharp spikes properly driven into the lower end will prevent its slipping, and is, perhaps, the simplest method, but often this is not desirable, as such a ladder will injure a floor. A ladder which is free from this objection is shown in the illustration.

Plan of Non-Slipping Ladder.

and may be made by fastening a piece of board to the bottom. The board should be about three feet long and eight inches wide, and should be placed on the lower side. An old, weather-beaten hemlock board makes the best footing. It should be fastened at an angle so as to lie flat upon the floor. It may be nailed firmly in place, but generally it is better to fasten it with a pair of strong strap hinges. It will not slip upon the smoothest and hardest bare floor.

Early Rishers. A pleasing fruit may be derived from the sale of rishers in the early spring if a little extra attention is given the plants. After the ground is thoroughly frozen, which the plants with a good layer of coarse stable manure, which may remain until absorbed by the ground. When the buds appear, cover the plants with hemlock boughs or straw. Take them off as soon as the plants are in leaf, and allow the stalks to harden, and in a short time you will be ready to supply the always strong demand for early vegetables.

TAKING CARE OF TOOLS.

They Should Be Under Shelter and in Their Places.

One of the greatest needs on the farm is for a system by which the tools may be taken care of, heard a farmer the other day make the remark that he had a good drill that he had used for 30 years and that it would not have lasted 10 years if it had not been kept in the shed. That illustrates the difference in the ways of keeping tools. One farmer will leave his tools out in the sun and rain, and in 10 years an expensive tool is ruined. Another will use the greatest care about his tools, and in 30 years the same kind of a tool will be good for still more use.

I find that it is not always expensive to build a tool shed if one cannot afford a tool house, writes a correspondent of Farmers Review. In the building of two of my outbuildings, a barn and a shop for general work, I had them placed so that the back of the shop made a right angle with the back of the barn. Two sides no windows were needed, and this left two sides already constructed for my tool shed. Then all I had to do was to extend a roof from the shop and barn and I had a good shed for my large tools. The smaller tools are taken care of in my work shop.

I find that the best plan for taking care of small tools and parts of large tools is to have a great many pegs and hooks on the side of the shop. The tools are then always in sight and if one always puts the same tools in the same places it is not a difficult matter to find them when wanted. A tool that cannot be found when wanted is about the same as a lost tool.

No matter how much care is taken with the machinery in the way of providing a shed for it, I find that it must have careful attention on the part of the owner to make sure that the nuts are kept tight on all the wheel machines. One of the most vexatious things about the care of farm machinery is the tendency for the bolts to work out and get lost. The working out of a single nut on the end of a bolt may put the machine out of use for hours and perhaps days. The nuts work out because they are not looked after. I wish some one would invent some system of making it impossible for nuts to work out.

FOR HANDLING MANURE.

Put Cart Body on Drag For Use on the Snow.

To get out manure in winter, when there is a moderate amount of snow upon the ground, try this plan, suggests Farm Journal: Set the cart body on the "drag," or stone box, as suggested in the cut. The load can be spread in the field with great ease.

Cart Body on Drag.

because it is down so low; and loading at the barn is also easy for a similar reason. If there is a manure shed to which the manure is wheeled daily, empty the barrow into the cart. When this is full, haul to the field.

Government Model Farms. James H. Hill, president of the Great Northern railway, believes that model farms should be established in every agricultural county of the United States, under control of the several state governments, or of the national government, or of the two conjointly. Such farms, he argues, would radiate intelligence, activity and reform in villages, with the possibility of doubling the farm product of the country. "Night is not the best time to argue," he says, "but such a system would cost, say, through the nation, a couple of millions." A significant declaration by Mr. Hill is that such a scheme should be kept out of the clutches of the spoils system.

Effect of Straw Plowed In. Where straw is cut up and plowed into the soil, it materially helps the soil. If the soil is deficient in potassium, the truth of this has been proved on people that have tried the application of straw on land of this character. The resultant growth of grain, however, will be disappointing, as the straw will give enough potassium to help out the formation of the stalk of the grain but not enough to give the best results in the way of a harvest. The same result will come if a little of a deficient material is added to a soil.

GOT THE DAUGHTER AND A JOB.

"Do you want my daughter do you?" said the proprietor of the newspaper to the young man who was sitting nervously on the edge of a chair in the parlor.

"Yes, sir," "Have you spoken to her on the subject?" "Yes, sir," "And how do you know you love her?" "How do I know?" gasped the young man. "I give you my word, sir, that I haven't eaten a square meal in two months, and sleep is almost out of the question for thinking of her."

"Young man, there's some style to that talk. I think you may come into the family. I need a man of your ability to answer to the circulation of my paper."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Victorious.

Two young men, both residents in a large Scotch city, met one day in the street.

"Well, Tam," said the first, "I hear you're in love w' bonny Kate McAllister."

"I must say," replied the other, "I was near—verry near—it; but the lass had one sister, no I said to myself, 'She be a man!' And I was a man, and now I pass her w' silent contempt."

Two Different Things.

Maud—Do you think a man can marry on $1200 a year?

Ethel—No, dear, he can marry on it, but he can't live on it.—Chicago Journal.

Hardened.

Mrs. Keyson—Weren't you frightened when the bull bellowed at you because of your new red costume?

Mrs. Pusey—No; you see my husband went on just the same when he got the bill.

Then They Went Off. "It strikes me that you are loaded," said the pistol to the double-barrel shotgun.

"Oh, not quite," rejoined the latter. "I'm only half-loaded."

Whereupon they both exploded with laughter.—Chicago Daily News.

Know Better.

"There's no changing a leopard's spots," remarked the villager at the zoo.

"Oh, yes there is," said the keeper. "I saw a lion fighting with one once, and he knocked the spots clean out of him."—Detroit Free Press.

Newspaper Deceit.

Exchange Editor—I am very sorry, sir, but there is something the matter with the nerves or muscles of my face, so it nearly kills me to laugh, and I wish you would have some one else do the job-clipping today.

Able Editor—Certainly. Give our humorist your shears, and you take his place and do the job-writing until your face gets well.—N. Y. Weekly.

To Examine the Nerveless.

"Ten dollars and costs." "All right, folks; now may I see the policeman who arrested me?"

"You wish to apologize to him for your conduct?"

"No; I merely wish to size him up in order to estimate what kind of a time I had last night."—Houston Post.

WIT AND WISDOM.

Yes, Which?

Pippie—I tell you, something ought to be done to end those Turkish atrocities.

Poppo—Sure, but which ones, rugs or cigarettes?—Philadelphia Press.

Children like its pleasant taste, and mothers give it hearty endorsement. Contains no opiates, but drives out the cold through the bowels. Made in strict conformity to Pure Food and Drugs Law. Recommended and sold by H. S. Pashard and W. E. Bosserman.

A Change of Spirits.

"Do you believe in corners, Mr. Jones?"

"No, indeed; I would die before I would go into a corner or countenance a monopoly. Why?"

"Why, Miss Petrie, when you admire so much, is all alone in a corner of the conservatory, and—what goes?"—Houston Post.

Best is the Great Restorer.

We tire our muscles by exercise and then rest to restore them; yet a great many of us do not stop to think how little rest we give to our stomachs. As a usual thing no part of our bodies is so generally overworked as our digestive organs. A tired and overworked stomach will give signs of distress to which we pay no heed until at last dyspepsia takes hold. Indigestion is just a warning, and if we heed the warning we can easily avoid further consequences. KODOL is a most thorough stomach relief. It digests what you eat and gives the stomach the needed rest and greatly assists in restoring it to its normal activity and usefulness. KODOL is sold on a guarantee relief plan. It is sold here by H. S. Pashard and W. E. Bosserman.

Worms.

Unsuspected worms are the cause of numerous little things that go wrong with children. When a child is sick you rarely think that its sickness is caused by worms, yet worms, either directly or indirectly, are the cause of three quarters of all the ill of childhood.

Children and often adults suffer from worms at night, are restless, feel listless and overworked in the morning; suffer with head and full belly, with occasional gripings and pains about the bowels; lose sleep, and often in children, diarrhoea; and in the majority of cases the cause of all the trouble is worms though you may not suspect their presence.

DR. TRUE'S ELIXIR

A pure vegetable compound, has been the standard remedy for worms since 1840. It never fails to expel the round, pin and tape worms, the commonest and most dangerous of the worms which infest the human system.

The elixir gives the children Dr. True's Worm Elixir, and it is not only a powerful purgative, but a powerful tonic, and gives the children a healthy, robust, and happy life.
